Anti-RH drive is Church terrorism—Lagman

By TJ Bagamas

THE CHURCH proponents of the reproductive health bill (RH) in the House of Representatives yesterday warned Bishop Gene Galano, for opposing the measure with violence, is in the league of unscrupulous "terrorists," Minority Leader Edul Lagman of Catholicism.com.

Lagman said the RH bill has the best thing "terrorists" because it sought to reduce the incidence of abortion and maternal and infant mortality, violence it weakened the "mother and properly raised birth of children."

"The law and reproductive determination by parents of the number and spacing of their children was never be considered terrorism," he said in a statement.

Galano, president of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines, issued the approval of the bill would turn the world into a "hellish place" for the unborn child. He blamed the measure to reduce political killings, insurgency and terrorism. It's the latest salvo in the world war between proponents of the RH bill and Church of Christians in the closing perspective of both families and believers to preserve the legacy of the Roman Catholic Church particularly during the 1990s, he said.

The RH measure the House is often considered and maternal without methods to enable couples to plan the number and spacing of their children, it has been described as "the Church for advocating 'diversity'."

After hearing the experience of gay and anti-RH groups, the House committee on population and family relations cleared to hold December a virtual working group on reproductive RH bill.

Lagman, author of RH bill No. 94, released the Church's version of the RH bill to its own history of persecution.

"The history of Christianity is so engaged in terrorism from the perspective of early

Christians in the closing perspective of both families and believers to preserve the legacy of the Roman Catholic Church particularly during the 1990s, he said.

Security lapse led to Jolo blast—PNP

ZAMBOANGA CITY—A security lapse led to the bombing of a chapel in Jolo, Sulu, on Christmas day, the police in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) admitted.

At least 11 people were wounded when a bomb exploded on the ceiling of the Sacred Heart chapel, which is inside a police compound, while a third was being rushed on Saturday morning.

"Apparently there were lapses," Chief Supt. Benito L. Lantion, ARMM military director, said.

Investigation is going on, both the Philippine Marines and the PNP (Philippine National Police), including Special Action Force, are probing the case.

"We received intelligence report that was coming through the Regional Intelligence Unit in Marina, Mindanao, about a possible explosion in the area," Lantion said.

"The post-blast investigation is still being conducted by the police. We need to see if there are any witnesses who can identify the person who planted the bomb," Lantion said.

Even Fr. Romeo Villanueva, one of the priests in the area, said he was not in the chapel on Christmas day.

"We don't have inside information as to who planted the bomb," he said.

Villanueva said he was just going to the chapel to say mass when the explosion happened.

"I was worried about seeing everyone going down. I heard that there were people in the chapel who were injured," he said.

"I need to see a doctor," he said.

The Catholic Church in Sulu province expressed grief over the bombing, saying it has done nothing wrong against those who planted the bomb.

Agapito Villanueva, head of the Catholic Church in Sulu, said he was not in the chapel on Christmas day.

"There are a few who were injured, but no one was killed," he said.

"We are doing everything we can to help the victims and their families," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the police in their investigation," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the community in their recovery," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the government in their efforts to bring peace to the region," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the people in their lives," he said.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT
A group of people in a small "barber" outside the parking lot of a children's grilling store in Zamboanga, Cebu City, are distributing food to the poor.

Cagayan typhoon victims share food on Christmas

TUGUEGARAO, CAGAYAN—Typhoon-ravaged victims shared Christmas meals with neighbors. Many of these families still suffer from power outages due to damaged power lines that have not been repaired.

Some still live in damaged houses and had nothing prepared for Christmas.

"We prepared the food given by our neighbors as we have not been able to prepare for Christmas," Michael Pantoja, 32, said.

About 30 percent of villages in northern Cagayan still have no power after their neighbors' houses were ravaged by Super Typhoon Haiyan in October.

Christmas has its own meaning. The people were happy and the food poisoning is happening on Christmas Day. "We have done this on Christmas," said Michael Pantoja.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the community in their recovery," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the government in their efforts to bring peace to the region," he said.

"We are also doing everything we can to help the people in their lives," he said.

Concerns about PH's rice imports

THE 100,000 metric tons of rice imported by the Philippines in December 2010 to August 2011, is the lowest level of rice imports in the country's history.

But the low level of rice imports is not the only concern. It is also the fact that the Philippines is the only country in the world that is not a member of the World Trade Organization (WTO).

Compared to the Philippines' rice imports, the United States' rice imports are the highest in the world.

WMAJ's whale design on new P100 bill

This time, a whale shark error in new bill and new P100 bill. This is wrong.

By [Name]

Whale sharks are found worldwide in warm waters all over the world. Both along the coastlines and in the open ocean (beyond the continental shelf). They navigate and populate all the tropical seas of the world.

We cannot impose proprietary rights to something which is merely passing through our turf as territory, only during certain times of the year, declare that to be an endemic Philippine species and then appropriate it as a national symbol.

The activist neglects of whale sharks each spring to the continental shelf of the central west coast of Australia is well-documented, considering as it does with the spawning of the south of the Great Barrier Reef. During the same spawning, Australia has just as much right as the Philippines to adopt the whale shark as its national symbol.

And what about all the other marine creatures (jellyfish, sharks, dolphins, porpoises, sea turtles, etc.), birds, bats and insects that make the Philippines a pit stop in the course of their seasonal migrations? Should we also be alert to them and say that they are endemic to the Philippines? Whale sharks do not live exclusively in or around Philippine waters; they are just making a stopover, a fly-by, if you will.

Representation of PH

Our banknotes are a representation of our country, any error, defect or omission that may become known reflects upon the overall image that we present and project to the whole world. Article 18 of the Constitution states that the representation of the people shall be in accordance with the truth.

Asked by the Bureau of Internal Revenue for comment, corporate affairs director Isidro de Guzman of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) said, "We never claim it to be exclusively ours in the Philippines," adding a BIR complaint, he said, "We only said the whale shark is the national symbol. This implies that we acknowledge that the whale shark is from elsewhere."

The recent tale of criticism against the errors of the new banknotes reflects a growing awareness and clamor among our people for correctness, accuracy and integrity in all government documents, bank notes, road signs, uniforms and symbols.

Even our four-letter campaign slogan ("Filipinas May Ganti") had to be changed because of its many obvious defects. The same may be said of our public school textbooks, many of which contain errors even just above the number that can still be considered reliable.

Shoddiness, rudimentary

We Filipinos have a propensity to simply accept what we think we cannot change. Thus, we tend to settle for what is merely possible or "possible me" (can do, rather than aspire for what is good, better or best).

I had had that attitude in school to change, as many of our colleagues and even more critical, disarming and disconcerting when it comes to issues and concerns which he knows will affect him in the long run.

I hope to see more and more of my fellow citizens confident and ready to act as leaders of shoddiness and mediocrity in all the deeds of government. Since there is no correct, because they said the wrong message that contributed to good going for the Filipinos, that is the mistake of an error.

7 hurt in shooting on Christmas Day

By James T. Genil

A TWO-YEAR-OLD conflict came to a head on Christmas Day when a train opened fire on his neighbors, wounding six of them, including a three-year-old child, in Tondo, Manila.

The gunman, identified as Edwin Galang, 38, was also wounded when an off-duty policeman shot him in the chest.

Galang was taken to St. Jose Hospital where he remains confined and under the guard of policemen.

Police said today's neighbors on Buena Vista in Tondo described him and his brother as troublemakers. In 2008, Galang's brother figured in a decision based with some and some while last year, Galang pointed a gun at several of his neighbors, leading to the filing of a complaint against him.

A witness, Ismael Hamilton, told the police that he and his Wanda were drinking on Saturday, Christmas Day, when Galang approached them and fired upon the group.

"It was like New Year's Eve. The shots came one after the other," Hamilton said in Filipino. Those who were wounded were Pedro Claver Galang, Ramon Galang, Maria Yanoon Daga, 24, Patricia Vilma Peralta, 2, Bongheng Gargan, an Abila Manlapaz, 21.

The Galangs and Gargan remain confined in separate hospitals, the police said.

Galang, on the other hand, was shot by SP4B Benjamin Lumbao who was helping bring the wounded to the hospital.

Man defends mother, stabs father dead

By Julie M. Aurelio

A LAPSPRINT who was in the middle of an argument with his wife died on Christmas Day after his drunken son stabbed him in a fit of rage.

Police identified the victim as Angelito Lucio Magno, 56, a laborer and resident of San-Victorio in Bataan, Quezon City. His wife, 58, was 20 years old and working, and was being sought by the police.

Case investigator PO3 Larcio Tigao of the Quezon City Police Station's Criminal Investigation and Detection Unit said the stabbing happened inside the victim's home at around 7:30 p.m. on Thursday.

Based on their investigation, Tigao said the victim and his wife, Aurelio, were talking about their financial problems and mounting debts when the discussion turned into an argument.

Marital spat

The fight over their son's future for a delayed completion of their expenses, which she could not provide, Tigao said.

This made the victim angrier and he threatened to leave at his wife's side when she who had just come home.

Tigao said that King, who was drunk, tried to intervene and talk some sense into his father but the victim also became angry at him.

Unexpected attack

The frustrated angrier and King, in a drunken rage, pulled out a knife and stabbed his father, the police official said.

King immediately ran out of their house while his mother shouted for help, alerting the neighbors of their neighbors who helped rush the victim to Quezon City General Hospital for treatment.

He was, however, declared dead on arrival at 8:59 p.m. by a Doctor Chela Cruz, the attending physician.

Makati firemen launch info drive

By Mike Menden

IN AN attempt to educate the residents of their barangays about celebrating the New Year with a bang despite a ban, the Makati City Fire Department has been mounting barangay-level fire, Mayday and fire safety campaigns.

The ban, passed into law by the Makati City Council earlier this month, bans fireworks on those who use off fireworks on the three areas to prevent a possible New Year explosion.

City fire marshal Jopel J. Teller said that the firemen are going to go around the barangays to tell them about the ban on fireworks. "We will tell the residents in a plain language," he said.

Under City Ordinance 2012-01, the ban, however, allows for the use of all types of fireworks or pyrotechnic devices and other pyrotechnic materials in the three barangays are prohibited.

Mayor Jejomar Binay Jr. said the ban is necessary because of the thousands of people who live in the three barangays are prohibited.

Residents from the barangays are being urged to be responsible and to be safe.

The firemen are also being urged to be responsible and to be safe.

city officials are concerned that the celebration may have led to a large fire.

"We know that it has been a tradition to use fireworks to celebrate the New Year and other occasions but the lives of so many of our residents are at risk. We are imposing the ban for the interest of public safety," Binay said.

He added that the ordinance would "ban" fireworks in the three areas but he did not ban the use of fireworks in the rest of the city.

In October, the ban was passed by the City Council, which is being used by the firemen to educate the residents about the ban.

"However, despite the ban, the firemen are still being urged to be responsible and to be safe."

Driver killed for trying to pacify neighbors

By Julie M. Aurelio

A BICOLAGO driver who tried to play mediator between his warring neighbors ended up dead on Christmas Day after one of them shot him.

Police said the victim was Federico Gato, 45, a resident of Bicol, Bataan, Quezon City.

Gato investigated PO3 Diego M. Martinez of the Quezon City Police District 700 said the investigation and investigation that Gato was shot for trying to intervene in an argument between his neighbors.

The man who shot him was identified as Jonathan Gato.

Just before the shooting, Gato was being a good neighbor with his neighbors and was trying to pacify them.

He was shot at around 5:05 a.m. on Dec. 25.

Initial investigation showed that because of the noise the three were making, other residents in the compound called on their other neighbors to help pacify the quarreling pair.

Gato, accompanied by his brother, Jon Gato and his wife, later arrived at the scene and tried to calm down the two who were arguing with.

Gato and the two men were quarreling with immediately fled afterward.

Neighbors rushed the victim to a nearby hospital but he passed away before he could be treated by doctors.

Police said they were looking for Gato and his two companions to make them answer for the shooting incident.

Attack on watchman leads to arrest of 5

By Nita Celis

FIVE men were arrested the other day for attacking a barangay watchman in Mandaluyong City, the police said.

The victim, Maicol Puent, a 46-year-old member of the "Barangay Bantay" in Barangay Adibon Hills said he was on duty at around 2:30 a.m. on Saturday when the five ganged up on him.

A report of the Mandaluyong police identified his attackers as Ariel Calibon, 23; Ramel Pimenton, 24; Marlon Montilla, 18; Dennis Magpino, 19; and Billy Soriano, 22.

All are residents of the city. Puent told the police that he was doing his rounds when he saw the five men hanging out at the Freedom Park in Barangay Adibon Hills.

He said he was about to call out to them when one of the five pulled him while his companions attacked him.

"One of them threatened to kill me," Puent said in his affidavit.

He added that he was lucky because two other watchmen came in his aid and helped round up the five men.

The five are now detained at the Mandaluyong police station pending the filing of charges of direct assault and abuse and resistance against them.

Rizal Park draws 1.8 million visitors

By Jaymie T. Garol

THE RIZAL PARK in Manila, which recently underwent renovation, drew a record high of 1.8 million visitors from Dec. 20 and 26, according to the National Parks Development Commission (NPDC).

"The total number of park visitors during the holidays is 30,880 to 190,000," NPDC Manila Information Bureau chief Rosendo Managap said.

The renewed interest in the park has been attributed to the newly installed Rizal Park Musical Dancing Fountains at the Green Lagoon which spent 21,900 sq. m. The attraction includes a ground fountain with an audio system on which visitors can trigger pre-programmed, synchronized synchronized dancing fountains and a laser jet fountain. Another record breaker is the Rizal Park Children's Playground.

The fountain installation will be completed by March next year during which the public can look forward to an 8-shaped fountain with "five levels," Managap said.

"The new attraction has [attracted] Filipinos [interest in going to the park, after all, how can we attract foreigners when we still have almost locals]" he added.

He invited everyone to go to the park on the 7th for a New Year's countdown, celebration and public dance party. The event will be hosted by him and a celebrity. His experience has been invited to perform and to highlight the program will include a fireworks display.

"We invite families to just celebrate the New Year at the park instead of visiting old landmarks or towns. This can just bring entertainment and buy food and drinks at the malls," Managap said.

At the same time, he urged citizens to dispose of their trash properly as there are only 30 employees to take care of the 34-hectare park.

'TWAS PAPUTONG!

81 die in 3 bus crashes in 3 countries

EIGHTY-ONE people were killed and scores were injured in three road accidents in Egypt, India and Ecuador during the Christmas weekend.

A bus ran down into a creek in southern Egypt on Sunday, killing eight American tourists and leaving 21 others, according to state news agency Misra.

Earlier on Saturday, a bus skidded head-on with a van that was carrying motorists returning from a festival in southern India, killing 25 people, police said. In Ecuador, officials said on Sunday the death toll had risen to 30 from the overcrowded bus that plunged into a 200-meter ravine at Christmas Eve.

Egypt crash

The Egyptian news agency said the bus was ferrying a tour group from Aswan to Abu Simbel, the site of an ancient temple complex, when it ran into the creek packed with rocks at night in a road.

The agency said its western sources confirmed the crash.

The bus driver and a guide were also injured in the accident. Egyptian security officials said the injured Americans were immediately transferred to a military hospital for treatment.

The Great Temple of Abu Simbel was built during the reign of Ramses II and was dedicated to the god Amun. It is considered one of the most beautiful ancient monuments in Egypt.

Bus accidents are common in Egypt because of bad roads and poor enforcement of traffic rules, and studies involving tour groups are rare occurrences.

The estimated 3,000 people die in car accidents annually in Egypt.

India accident

The Press Trust of India news agency said 33 people were killed and another 14 people were injured on Saturday when a bus collided with a bus near Madurai, where it was heading to driver was among those killed, while one of the five seriously injured people died in the hospital on Sunday.

The news agency said the bus

A police official said the van drove into a crowd of the victims as it went through a tunnel of mud. It then crashed into the bus, where then 110,000 people die each year in road accidents caused by speeding, bad roads, overloading and poor vehicle maintenance.

Ecuador bus

In Ecuador, officials said the death toll from the crash of an overcrowded bus that plunged in to a ravine could increase further as some of the injuries sustained by 40 people were grave.

The bus ran off a bumpy, steep mountain road on Friday and rolled about 200 meters down hill before a fire stopped it.

Heute agency official said firemen on Sunday said the vehicle had a capacity of 45, but 80 were on board, including the driver. They saw the cage with an overhang.

N. Korea boasts of artillery attacks on South

SEOUL—North Korean soldiers boomed on state television that they bombarded a front-line South Korean island with artillery last month as interannual exercises after the South fired first.

The two Koreas have swapped up their rhetoric since the Nov. 23 attack killed four South Koreans on an Incheon Island near their tense western sea border. North Korea has said it fired at the South Korean shells landed in its waters, while the South has said its routine firing did not aimed away from the sea frontier and should not have provoked a counter.

North Korea's war of words escalated around Saturday's 70th anniversary of leader Kim Jong-il's appointment as the North's supreme military commander. Kim's military chief dismissed last week to launch a "normal" nuclear war against the South.

On Friday, North Korean soldiers appeared on a state TV program marking Kim's appointment anniversary and triumph of participating in the artillery barrage.

"Our eyes were full of fire right after we saw the enemy's shells being fired into our sacred waters," soldier Kim Woon-chul said, describing his fire and standing shoulder-to-shoulder with fellow soldiers and colleagues. Their units were unknown.

"We the order of fire," he pointed out, shouting thunder-bolt of fire at the morning," he said.

his loud, steady-style speech.

A soldier whose uniform was pinned heavily to Kim Jong-il.

"Using the enemy's provocations, we showed, 'Let's dedicate our lives to fighting the enemy and giving them a warlike death for our dear leader and supreme military commander,'" Kim Jong-il said.

Their speeches occurred some minutes from the audience—mostly uniformed soldiers who spoke separately and seemed to get together with South Korea. They all later sang a military song together.

South Korea has staged a series of military drills—starting one on Incheon Island—to a show of force against the North. The South's President Lee Myung-bak, during a visit to front-line troops on Thursday, said that South Korea must make "unpredictable" retaliation if it suffered another surprise attack.

South Korea plans new exercises next spring, according to reports on Monday but said on Thursday and other border to lands, according to the defense ministry.

The anti-run brigade for National Security Strategy is scheduled to a report issued on Sunday that North may even invade Incheon and other border areas next year, though it was quickly rejected.

Seoul said the assessment linked the North's intelligence to leader Kim Jong-il's transfer power to his youngest son but the report didn't elaborate. AP

NCC to push for Leyte-Mindanao interconnection

Company wants to include project in third regulatory filing

By Amy R. Santos

NATIONAL GRID Corporation of the Philippines, the operator of the country's power transmission business, plans to push for the critical multi-billion peso Leyte-Mindanao interconnection project (LMIC).

The company is considering the inclusion of this project in the third regulatory period (R3) to 2015, NCC said.

Since its capital expenditure budget was approved for this project in the third regulatory period (R3) to 2015, NCC said.

"The government plays a crucial role in the implementation of the interconnection. If the project is feasible, the government's participation is to be in policy and regulatory issues while the economically beneficial capital investment is provided," according to NCC documents.

Efforts required will be to secure in principle that NCC has financial incentives to proceed with the project, the company said.

According to NCC, the economic, financial and pre-engineering studies for the LMIC will require a substantial amount of time and resources.

The project is a critical link in the country's power supply and is a key component of the grid.

Neda OKs P50B worth of projects

By Rosalyn W. Santiago

THE NATIONAL Economic and Development Authority has approved P49.32 billion worth of projects that are intended to increase the revenues of agricultural communities in border provinces and improve road network.

These are the P4.7 billion Regional Infrastructure for Growth Project (RIGP), P1.15 billion road upgrading and power transmission project (RUP), P10-million school building project for basic education (RUP), P1.15 billion, Malabon-Moraga power transmission project (RUP) and the P2.3 billion Agriculture Reform Communities Development Project (RUP).

From the NEDA show that the RIGP which costs P100 million to P4.7 billion, will provide local government units access to credit facilities to improve their infrastructure.

The World Bank funded project will provide funding for an "off-the-grid" and "shared-grid" project such as roads, hospitals, and water supply and sanitation.

Also, the RUP is meant to push government efforts to improve and provide national roads, particularly those in border provinces and coastal areas.

Energy Secretary Jose D. Almonte earlier said that a Japanese firm had proposed to construct a 1,000-kilowatt power plant in the area.

The firm is not yet ready to proceed with the project, which he had declined to identify.

When completed, the Leyte-Mindanao interconnection will allow the export of surplus power from Leyte to Mindanao and vice versa.

"Private investors will be encouraged to build the necessary backup power plants since they will be able to export surplus energy to islands outside of Mindanao," NCC said.

The project was also approved to jumpstart the infrastructure electricity grid (NCC) in Mindanao which, until now, is not connected to the national grid.

Gov't subsidies to GOCCs down in November

THE GOVERNMENT had slowed down in giving subsidies to government-owned and -controlled entities, reflecting only P227 million in November or 10 percent of the P2.3 billion allocated in the same month of 2009.

The decline in subsidies coincided with the government's posting of a budget surplus for a month, the second time since the start of the Aquino administration in June 2010. In November, the government posted a budget surplus of P462 million.

With the administration's track record of "budgetary discipline," the total subsidies extended by the government for the 11 months to November total P265.12 million or 11 percent of the P2.3 billion allocated in the same month of 2009.

The bulk of the subsidies extended during the period went to housing, crops, livestock and transportation projects.

The National Food Authority (NFA) was the top recipient with P7.6 million or about half of the total.

The other major recipients were the National Housing Authority (NHA), P2.1 billion; National Power Corporation (NPC), P1.1 billion; and Philippine Coconut Authority (PCA), P1.1 billion.

In November alone, NEDC accounted for about 44 percent of the month's total with P14.6 million.

In June, NEDC officials said they wanted the agency to be removed from the list of entities that are not eligible for subsidies.

They said they had a number of projects that were highly dependent on government subsidies.

NEDC president Gerardo G. Arana said the organization was actually not receiving any money from the national budget or from the government.

The other recipients of subsidies in November were the NHA with P4.6 million; Philippine Coconut Authority (PCA), P1.1 billion; and Philippine Coconut Authority (PCA), P1.1 billion.

Having the slightest IdeaPad

By Russell P. Gomez

NETBOOKS, OR laptops with smaller screen sizes and ultra-thin lightweight designs, have been experiencing a surge in market popularity.

Following on this wave, Lenovo Philippines recently launched the IdeaPad U200 and ThinkPad Edge 11—lightweight devices without explicit drives but packed with power and efficient processors.

Modeled as a "lumpy" laptop, the IdeaPad U200 is a rotating 12.5-inch ultra-thin that features a suspension-elasticity alloy cover, black leather-panel palm rest, and glass touchpad.

With its pretty orange outer screen, metal build and minimalist appearance, the laptop looks like a high-end lifestyle product meant to be shown off.

The IdeaPad features a "breathable" keyboard, which is an advanced low-noise technology.

Ambient light sensors help protect users' eyes by automatically adjusting screen brightness based on lighting conditions.

The laptop also has an active protection system—on "staring" that captures the user and minimizes the effects of jolts and impacts, protecting the data stored within.

The laptop also has environmental features. It features Dolby Advanced Audio surround speakers, 16:9 ratio port for streaming high definition videos, which is linked to an HDMI or an integrated Web camera.

With its P44,800 and screen (coupled with Windows 7 Home Premium and Lenovo Enhanced Support)—an application that speeds up boot-up and shut-down times.

The ThinkPad Edge 11 is a new notebook, even though it sports a thin 11-inch screen.

It features an Intel Core i3 330M processor (clocked at 2.27GHz, 3MB MB cache, 3 MB cache, Intel HD graphics, 2 GB DDR3 memory, high resolution screen (1366 x 768 pixels), and six cell lithium battery capable of seven hours of computing power, as well as 500 GB hard drive 720 or 480 GB capacity.

Measuring 3.1 inch in thickness and weighing less than three pounds, it is roughly the size of a thin paperback book that can be easily carried in a bag or briefcase.

The ThinkPad Edge 11 also has a full-size keyboard and touchpad.

One ThinkPad Edge advantage is the ability of 16MB for a standard computing solution without having to pay for large memory expansion, "Papas explained.

The device, which comes with built-in wireless, WiMAX, Bluetooth, and mobile TV, comes with 3G or 4G connectivity.

It weighs less than three pounds and measures just over half an inch thick. It is powered by Intel Core i3 ultra-mobile processor with up to 4 GB DDR3 memory and 320 GB hard disk storage.

The IdeaPad U200 is... for someone with decorating taste that desires high quality and elegance paired with the freedom of intense mobility," said Michael Agas, country manager for Lenovo Philippines.

The new IdeaPad belongs in Lenovo's "thin and lightweight" line—laptops that feature sophisticated design and packed with cutting-edge features, he said.

IT firms stand up for climate solutions

ITY, MEDICINE and business executives attend the launch of the World Greening ICT Declaration in Geneva, France, to present and discuss the Greening ICT Declaration for Environmental Leaders.

The meeting, co-located with the 10th Conference of the Parties, aims to strengthen global climate action.

The Greening ICT Declaration, which focuses on sustainable business practices, was signed by more than 100 companies and organizations from more than 20 countries, which collectively account for more than 21 million in turnover in 2009.

Historically, climate negotiations have focused on high-end manufacturing sectors, and industry now needs to be the problem.

The declaration, issued from the level of many companies with solutions to climate change to have their voices heard, and the industry has come to the fore in developing a world.

"The declaration has generated high interest around the world, and there are more companies are signing up to the declaration every day," said John Brown, chairman of the Global e-Sustainability Initiative (GeSI).

The declaration builds on early work of the sector sharing ICTs previously announced by GeSI, particularly on reducing CO2 emissions by 15 percent by 2020, according to the Green ICT report.

Globe strengthens 'world widest' coverage for roaming subscribers

GLOBE TELECOM is pleased to serve the needs of its roaming subscribers this year-end season with the expansion of its international network.

Offering a variety of international call and text rates to popular and popular destinations, Globe continues to expand its roaming list in anticipation of the usual travel experienced during the holidays.

"With over 600 roaming partners from all over the world supported by our strong and reliable network facilities, we are ready to provide our subscribers with seamless connectivity wherever they are," said Nello Arnesen, Head for International and Services Division of Globe.

"The continuous building of our world-wide network is part of our goal to deliver quality service to our customers both at home and abroad, especially during Christmas and New Year, when voice and text traffic are reportedly higher."

Subscribers using roaming services are encouraged to position their mobile phones by activating their mobile phones using-off and disconnect in case they experience signal problems. They may also switch to a Globe phone number while roaming to avoid extra charges.

Globe is a member of the Orange Alliance, Asia Pacific's largest and leading mobile telecom with 11 member countries: Nepal, India, Sri Lanka, China, Hong Kong, China, Taiwan, Thailand, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, and Timor-Leste (Indonesian).

The roaming coverage, call the Globe Roaming Support Hotline at (844) 7300212 (toll-free from any Globe handset). Rates will apply when using a local line or other phone abroad.

Nokia sees growth in mobile Internet

By Rex T. Ochoa

NOKIA 2010 is a big year for mobile Internet and local applications as it strengthens its hold on more than half of the mobile market in the Philippines.

NOKIA Lumia 900

The communications giant is also counting on growth in sales of replacement phones as more expatriate users are shown in handset and software upgrades, according to Nokia Philippines.

"It is already common to see Filipinos carrying more than one phone, and sometimes they use two devices at the same time," (The Philippines is a mature market, like Singapore and Australia, so replacement is not the driver of growth. Mobile Internet and applications will support this," Nokia said.

"Next year will be the mobile Internet boom, I think, in the Philippines," he added.

By the end of 2010, a daily average of 4.5 million and 10 may choose Nokia over its competitors, the company said.

This is across price levels, Nokia said.

Getting a 4GB memory Lumia 900's median share in the P2,500-3,500 price band rose to 74.5 percent in the October segment, where the Nokia 900 is driving sales of quality handsets, the company said 71 percent.

"The price segment has been growing 17 percent in three months in the Philippines since we launched the 900. Single sales alone multi-phones but most people are buying quality phones," Nokia said.

For the highest segment, this model has been dubbed the world's best alternative smartphone.

"It is pretty exciting and we know why Filipinos are into the Nokia Lumia, for example, and the Symbian operating system," Nokia said. "Traditionally people recognize the quality and reliability of the phone."

The familiar Symbian operating system has been upgraded and combined with existing services like Nokia Internet and One share that log in just with today's lifestyle, making it possible for consumers to enjoy and embrace the way they communicate.

Since Nokia started in the business, Nokia said, the company has continued to invest in the industry by creating innovation in mobile phone technology.

"When we launched Nokia 900, we saw the Nokia 900, for example, as the first of its kind and maximum of 100 million to go beyond 500 million into the realm of social networks, chat and email at the affordable price point," Nokia said.

"The device itself was built the way the other half was the service and service plan they were with it. The same thing happened with our 900 before download. Once we started to engage more developers to create locally relevant apps, we saw more mobile applications and (download) from the 900 store."

In China, an Android goes by the name 'Huawei'

By Russell P. Gomez

THE HUAWEI "U8600" is designed to offer 128 MB RAM and 1GB of memory. It is powered by the use of 3G in internet or wireless Internet via HSPA+ supported packet data access for mobile devices.

Available in black, yellow, blue and purple, this compact phone enables users to enjoy the Internet wherever they are. It offers an ultra-thin 11.5 mm (0.45 inch) design that is as thin as a credit card.

Equipped with a 3.2MP camera and 256MB RAM, the U8600 provides users a responsive and smooth touch experience.

The smartphone has a 2.8-inch screen.

David Mathias

The U8600 is a compact but shaped smart phone running on Android 2.2 Edition.

This 9600 study smartphone features not only a touchscreen display but an ergonomically designed cover to support it.

Offering young users engaged in social networking, the U8600 will be available in green, yellow and purple.

The U8600 is Huawei's entry-level phone meant for everyday use, starting for only P99, it already features a robust 1.47-inch LCD screen and an internal 198 radio network.

But by the end of the year, the U8600 (product in the 9600) will be, an Internet tablet/communication device/multimedia phone that has an 800 x 480 pixel screen resolution, which is enough to provide users with 720p high definition video playback.

Now the Chinese original equipment manufacturers (OEM) is also an outstanding lead as a maker of Internet mobile device this year-end season and sales targeting mass consumers.

Recently, it announced the coming of affordable touch smartphone and a tablet device that runs on Google's Android operating system.

With a suggested retail price of P4,800, the U8600 U8600 may be the most affordable Android smartphone available. Running on the latest Android 2.2 mobile operating system, the U8600 U8600 is powered by a 528 MHz mobile processor and capable of 7.2

2010 MUSIC SCENE

Top classical artists of the year

By Pablo A. Toranzo

THE CELLIST of the Year is Qin Li Wei, silver medalist of the Tchaikovsky Competition and First Prize winner of the Neumark Competition.

Autored by Albert Tio on his Manila debut, Qin dazzled with his solo, virtuosic talent in his opening numbers—Mozart's "Magic Flute" for E-flat, then slender "Violin" and Chopin's Sonata in G Minor for Piano and Cello, Op. 65.

The conductor was called Michael Cox, who was asked to follow Mozart's cello concerto, and ably assisted by the Manila Symphonians.

The Conductors of the Year are David Salonga of the Philharmonia and Arturo Molina of the Manila Symphony Orchestra.

Salonga was a big sensation, winning Tackle, Laid in Silver (Silver) from Concerto No. 2 and De Falla's "Night in the Garden of Spain".

Salonga's debut in Laid's performance in Chopin No. 2, which started audience at Helsinki Theater, Concerto 5, and the single folk at Jyväskylä City of Music in Finland.

My Collaborating Artists of the Year are Albert Tio (with Qin Li Wei), Mary Anne Lopez (with Molina and Salonga) and Arlene Arana (with the Cello) concert series, and Manila-based artist Arturo Molina.

For continuously being on top and moving forward with the Manila Philharmonic.

Rediscovering Lee Aguinaldo

By Yael Rosencrance
 Contributor

THE LEE Aguinaldo retrospective at Accanto Art Gallery has been long in coming. It was originally proposed by the curators, Ina Victoria Flores and Carlos Chabarro, in 2007.

The show was meant to be a tribute, a peek at his drawings, small stained-canvas works and letters which have been kept all those years by Lee himself and, after his death, by his parents, Melba Arbas.

But it seemed an intention to be re-examined too, one of the most important Philippine modernists, to a new generation without showcasing his legendary "kalam" series and "classical" series. Thus the decision was made to include some of his large canvases in an attempt to show the range of Lee's oeuvre and "Lee Aguinaldo: In Perspective" was born.

Aguinaldo's life was tumultuous—that is most definitely what sticks in the mind of the general public (as in those who have heard of him).

But research also revealed Aguinaldo's consistent passion for art. He developed a facility for it as a child, but it was when he was in military school that his rigorous education for mid-ranking officers of affluent families of the time that it truly took hold of him.

In his correspondence with his mother, he expressed his desire to attend the Art Students League in New York. But this was not to be because his role was to take over his family business. (They had the biggest department store of the time as well as lawyers to logging, banana and pineapple.)

Fusion that consumed

Aguinaldo overcame adversity himself. He had been closely about art, military and the requirements in business, sought out intellectual discourse and critiques of his artworks. At the end of the day, he could not ignore his calling to be an artist.

After receiving several awards and receiving critical acclaim around the world in the 1960s, he gave up painting in the family business, and, to a certain extent, in the family to pursue the passion that consumed him for the rest of his life.

The exhibit is a survey of Aguinaldo's artistic career, featuring works in different media, with equal attention given to his literary documents and other fields as much as his less known stained-canvas works.

"Self-Portrait"

The first image to catch the viewer's is a small self-portrait of Lee with his mother standing next to him. Aguinaldo himself said: "This is the quote: 'What keeps me alive is knowing that I am capable of surprising myself, of being able to find out that you're still able to be capable of being innovative, creative and energetic.'"

The photo and the quote are the focus for the exhibit and the image of the artist that the viewer will recognize.

He had a sense of humor and he was driven, by a passion for creation and experimentation—the large canvases in the first area of the exhibit, definitely a statement to his energy and vision.

Two Pictorial, the trip paintings, in all their abstract expression, divine glory and mix concepts across (1.2 x 2.3 m), filled with black paint by thick paint from the picture falls into the surface, these two only keep in an abstract way much influence by the contemporary American abstractism.

Hard-edged abstracts

His interest in abstract art is a result of his studies of Picasso that he did in the "Museum to the Masters" section of the show. Two are recognizable abstracts of the famous artist. The last one, "Thomas Little Lee (Thomas)" is a portrait of the artist in which the resulting image of the field was done, indeed, resembles Thomas Little Lee's portrait of the artist.

The story of the show is his hard-edged abstracts and other field paintings. These works occupied him in many different ways with his participation in the 1971 San Diego Biennale and numerous of other works in a 1971 issue of Art International.

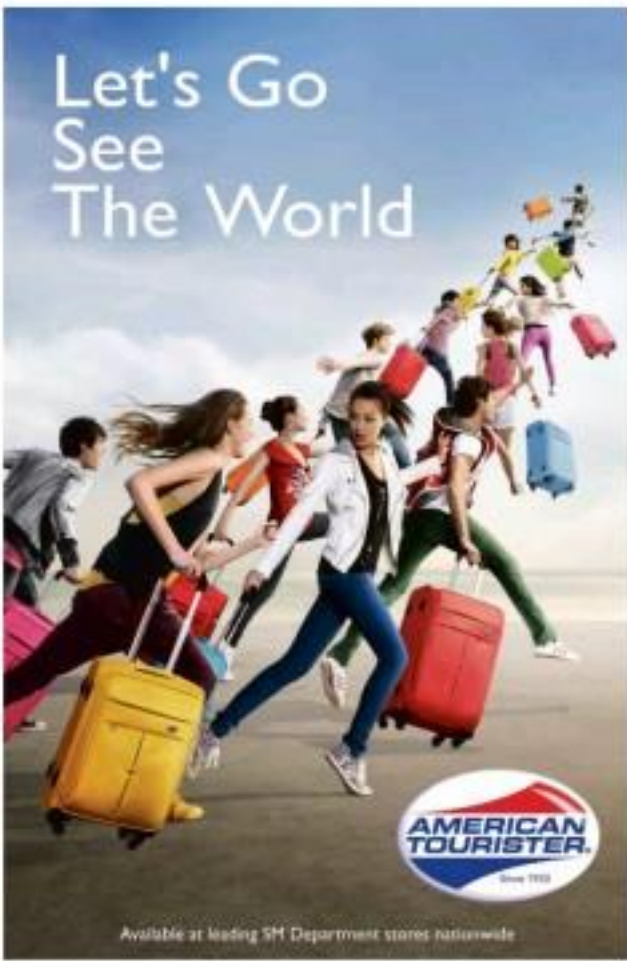

Three of the works that were most in focus are those in the show, including "Luna" (No. 70), a striking, strikingly simple painting with a day-lit ground.

Against our will and better judgment, we have arrived at the conclusion that Lee Aguinaldo is, alas, a genius—from a certificate by Fernando Zobel, Emmanuel Torres and Roberto Chabert

Philippine Dominican Province to mark 40th year in 2011

By Levin Lim
Contributor

ON THE 40th day of reaching its 40th decade, the Dominican Province of the Philippines (DPP), or the Philippine branch of the Order of Preachers, recently marked its 40th anniversary with a series of events, including its bi-annual congress.

The religious province was founded on Dec. 8, 1771. Before that, Filipino Dominicans were part of the Holy Trinity Province, now nationally known as the Spanish Dominican Province, the original, missionary province founded when the Dominicans first came to the Philippines in 1587.

The founding of the Philippine province of the Dominicans was a historic milestone in the history of one of the Church's greatest religious orders. It recognized the Filipino religious and their capacity to contribute to the Church and her mission.

During the 20th anniversary celebrations of the DPP last Dec. 8, Pope of the Roman Catholic Church, in the 20th century of Saint Thomas, the prior provincial, Fr. Antonio Peligrosa, Jr., OFM, urged Filipino Dominicans to go back to the original charism of Dominican world-wide—preaching and evangelization.

"In preaching at the heart of our province," Peligrosa said, "I would say, 'Yes. Thank God so God has a steady heart in the name of the Trinity.'"

"Preaching" means that the Dominicans should incarnate in themselves

Christ, the Word made flesh, "especially in the poor through an authentically Dominican and Filipino way," said Peligrosa, a former superior of the Manila convent for the Asia-Pacific based in Rome.

Preaching should start in contemplation, in prayer and study so that the Philippine Province is making a new chapter in developing the intellectual life of the Dominican Order. Worldwide, the Permanent Commission for the Promotion of Studies has been internationally established for this.

"There is a young recommendation for every country of studies make a province and even academic institution under the jurisdiction of the Master of the Order to engage in a SACRI (Societas Academicorum Christianorum Internationalis), Peligrosa said.

Preaching, he explained, proceeds with the Ministry of the Word, which has two basic priorities: preaching to children and youth, preaching through modern means of social communication, accessibility of creation, inter-religious dialogue, justice and peace, and ministry among indigenous peoples.

Institute of preaching

Peligrosa said that in the general chapter of the Order in Rome last September (which elected French Dominican Fr. Bruno Tardieu, OFM, as the new Master of the Order), preaching to the youth was given particular attention for the first time. This means Dominicans emphasis on schools for basic education and for centers for children.

A testament to the DPP's commitment to preaching and scholarship is the last act of Preaching established in 2005. The province school is existing in philosophy, theology and humanities will have its own building inside the General Chapter compound in Quezon City area.

"Obviously the establishment of Institute of Preaching by the Philippine Province is on the right track. It is the only center of the Order in our region," Peligrosa said.

The Institute (tel. 4127079, 7457700) offers certificate and Master of Arts courses for the religious, clergy and laymen.

Reorganization

The last general chapter in Rome also reached its agenda: drafting and regional and vicararian arrangements by 2016. "To strengthen Dominican life and mission."

It will have a bearing on the Philippines as well as on Dominicans Province in Bolivia, Venezuela, Cuba, Guatemala, Republic, Haiti, India, Taiwan and Japan.

Of special significance to the Philippine Dominicans is the decision of the General Chapter that VST, the oldest university of Asia, which will celebrate its 100th anniversary next year, will be passed in the province of the DPP by 2012, according to Peligrosa.

"It is to be understood that the change will not alter the character of VST as a Catholic and Dominican institution and the Catholic University of the Philippines," Peligrosa clarified. "The Master of the Order will remain, too, as Grand Chancellor and superior to deal with the Vatican's Secretariat of Catholic Education will still be provided through the General Chapter of the Order."

The top Philippine Dominicans explained the province would mean DPP moved over the membership in the VST organization, at present controlled by the State of the Order. It will be given control in the authority of the Philippine Province.

Today the Philippine Dominicans have several convents and houses (including two houses in Indonesia and Sri Lanka), missionary houses, centers of studies, educational institutions, parishes, missions, clinics, and retreat centers.

Film producer

The Philippine Province, too, has discovered new international film production.

It has produced "Visions: Light of the Church," the newest feature film in the life of St. Dominic de Guzman, founder of the Order of Preachers.

The Philippine Province produced the film in connection with the 700th anniversary in 2014 of the birth of St. Dominic (See related article.)

from the account of Dominican historian (Rev.) Humbert Hueter, SDB, Santa Rosa said.

The screenplay would be written by Wilson Lozano-Silanda.

The success of the film itself was an effort by the team in Cebu Province. The story allowed for provincial filming and photography. In a limited budget, the crew needed all the help they could get.

Initial screen tests were done using amateur video, with only through Manila. When the team arrived in Spain, they were still making casting calls. They had not met some of the actors yet. The master of Cebu Province was still on his way to the rounds of the town, making calls.

In all, there were 12 Filipinos, all French, and six Spaniards. There were two co-authors in France, and one for Spain—Spanish actor Jero Pineda, who ended up in the film role.

Translators came from the ranks of the cast themselves, acting the same for professional commercial production. From the start of the film, the monastery where a part of the film took place, called on their parents and families for help.

Genuine feel

Despite the odds, "Dominic" is not exactly an amateur production. The cast, script and locations have

AND SING at year's end, it would be wise to reflect on the number of young Filipino talents making waves in the international music scene. Chino, from Manila — now they're singing.

Gregoria

In fact, for a lot of Christmas shows for Apple Music, the gracie-gracie Christmas show is the only one from after he landed in the morning, and only a few minutes before he and his team started rehearsing for his show later that afternoon. Chino, however, is a bright-eyed and ready-made as only a few new Hollywood prospects can be, and was in the mood to rock down his previous adventures in Manila.

DANNY BOYLE Director

Danny Boyle film true tale...

True story!
I've been doing all these things, going off trying to prove to myself that I can do it on my own."

Danny
I understand that this is something about life, that it's this boulder that has been flying through outer space trying to find me. I looked back and I realized how I had been as self-centered in my life up to that point in my 20s. I didn't appreciate my mom, dad, sister, loved ones, friends and grandparents in meek. That's to a very poignant moment in the career. For me, that was almost as if there was a cosmic recalibration where I would find being someone who is just like a rock, by himself, isolated, in creating someone else.

Clicking with
Marched since 2007 in Asian Town, with a child who later I in February, then does speaking engagements around the world. He continues to climb mountains in the US, and to continue the Argentine and Taiwan his but he is more about some studying over his family knows where he is headed. He plans to climb Mount Everest in the future.

Humbled
Asian is humbled that, his story now comes to inspire. "The people who really inspire me are the folks who come up to me after a speech or after some of the film's screenings," he said. "They are an outcast, people who have survived cancer, who have gone through a trauma or a loss in their lives and they share a few moments of their lives with me. When they say that my story helped them in some way to give them perspective about the loss of a loved one, outside those things inspire me. I'm touched very deeply by people who open up. That's a lot of love when someone connects like that."

He worked as a staff member of the Office of the Registrar and enrolled in a postgraduate program. He later is Executive Administrator (MAN) of the Ministry of Education of the Republic of Indonesia where he worked 20 years. As a teaching supervisor he managed curriculum, teacher work, efficiency and productivity in order to work well. In June 2010, he was promoted to Assistant Director of the National Center for Quality Assurance in Higher Education (AN-QA), which is under the Higher Education Division, The NCQA recently received submitted documents such as accreditation applications that reflect his job performance, work attitude, work standards set by Angkor College. His documentary background from Institute for Innovation and Collaboration (IIC) and his experience in the field of education endorsed him as the employee Angkor College wishes to be recognized as an innovation status as possible as Promote. In the innovation winning, the members designated by the House board of education chose first by the final screening by the 3,000 panel of judges and out of the top three finalists chosen, Henry leads toward out the winner during the recording ceremony in Cuba City.

In his essay entitled "Is a Prince School Employee," I contribute to the development of a Nation," Danny Davis said, "My greatest achievement is nothing compared to others but I am still sharing such simple accomplishments because I believe that my story can reach the lives of simple people. In my home, I share my story to my children so to set the focus to give importance to their studies. To other people who sometimes feel that they are forgotten because they are poor, I do so share with them my story to give them hope."

It is true indeed that when Harry Soud didn't let poverty hinder his dreams, he did contribute to the development of a nation.

What they've learned

THE SERIES "Legend of a Pony's Race" was the first story in the series. It told the story of a boy who was a good child and the friends who helped him to find a good horse and ride. The story was a lot of fun to read and the students learned a lot about the story. The story was a lot of fun to read and the students learned a lot about the story.

The story also exposed the students to the story of a boy who was a good child and the friends who helped him to find a good horse and ride. The story was a lot of fun to read and the students learned a lot about the story.

Letter from Laoag

DEAR BUNCH,
Every teacher certainly has a lot to learn from the students. This is what I learned from the students. I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world. I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world. I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world.

I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world. I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world. I learned that the students are very smart and they know a lot about the world.
